University of Providence is seeking virtual preceptors/sites for MHA student capstone projects for spring semester

Would you like to contribute to the growth and development of the next generation of healthcare leaders in an effort to improve the quality of our healthcare system? If your answer is yes, then please read on! My name is Deanna Melton-Riddle and I serve as the Program Director of the MHA Program at the University of Providence. I am reaching out in hopes that you might be interested in working with our students who have completed their coursework for the MHA degree program and will begin their Capstone experience.

We are in need of sites for our students to complete their final capstone project, with someone who would be willing to serve as a preceptor. Our next group of students are set to begin their Capstone experience in the Spring of 2023. The experience is 100% virtual, and the type of project focus is at the discretion of the organization: for example, we have partners who have engaged students in projects focusing on surge capacity, the efficacy of home health visits, patient satisfaction data, and improving the customer service skills of frontline caregivers. and ways to reduce recidivism rates in the foster care system.

For more information regarding the process of becoming a partner site and preceptor, please feel free to contact:

Dr. Deanna Melton-Riddle: deanna.meltonriddle@uprovidence.edu and I will be happy to schedule some time with you to speak further about what the Capstone entails.

Thank you for your time and consideration,

Dr. Deanna Melton-Riddle
