

Blessing for the Longest Night

Blessing for the Longest Night

By Jan Richardson from *The Cure for Sorrow: A Book of Blessings for Times of Grief*¹

All throughout these months as the shadows have lengthened, this blessing has been gathering itself, making ready, preparing for this night.

It has practiced walking in the dark, traveling with its eyes closed, feeling its way by memory by touch by the pull of the moon even as it wanes.

So believe me
when I tell you
this blessing will reach you
even if you
have not light enough
to read it;
it will find you
even though you cannot see it coming.

You will know the moment of its arriving by your release of the breath you have held so long; a loosening of the clenching in your hands, of the clutch around your heart; a thinning of the darkness that had drawn itself around you.

This blessing does not mean to take the night away but it knows its hidden roads, knows the resting spots along the path, knows what it means to travel in the company of a friend.

So when this blessing comes, take its hand.
Get up.
Set out on the road you cannot see.

Blessing for the Longest Night

This is the night when you can trust that any direction you go, you will be walking toward the dawn.
